

September 2014

Pastor-Advisory Board

Rev. Bill Bates
Destiny Christian Center, Centralia

Rev. Earl Bradley
Capital Region Ministries, Olympia

Rev. Randy Burtis
Luis Palau Crusades

Rev. Kevin Earls
Gateway Christian Fellowship, Shelton

Rev. Mike Fogaras
Gateway Christian Center, Olympia

Rev. Ted Hanson
Abundant Life Fellowship, Bellingham

Rev. Scott Manley
Flood The Sound, Olympia

Rev. Scott Montagne
Bayside Community Church, Kingston

Rev. Jon Oletske
Stone Church, Yakima

Rev. Ken Parsley
Church on the Move, Yakima

Rev. Jim Ripley
Neighborhood Christian Cntr, Tumwater

Rev. Reuben Sapien
The Sanctuary Church, Lynnwood

Rev. Dan Secrist
Faith Assembly of Lacey

Rev. Tim Taylor
Watchman Ministries International

Rev. Dwain Wolfe
New Horizons Christian Center, Fife

Board of Directors

Paul Middleton
Chairman, Olympia

Jim Winterstein
Secretary/Treas., Olympia

Scott Blanton
Vancouver

Bob Higley
Olympia

Dorsey Holt
Shelton

Jere Irwin
Yakima

Mike Odell
Blaine

Dick Raport
Camano Island

Jim Robinson
Spokane

Fred Weiss
Bellevue

Rick Forcier
Executive Director

Staff

George Gauntlett
Data Administration

Beth Davis
Accounting

Julie Gallagher
Prayer Coordinator

Rusty Howell
Field Director

Steve Matthews
Field Director

Celebrate Diversity. Really?

Hoping to assuage militant Islam, is America making room for another god?

A fig for your feuds and vendettas! Germans and Frenchmen, Irishmen and Englishmen, Jews and Russians—into the Crucible with you all! God is making the American.”

--Melting-Pot, 1908, by Israel Zangwill, playwright

The meteoric rise of militant Islam worldwide, introducing a heightened national threat now that beheadings have come to our shore, makes us shake our heads when our President says Islam is a “religion of peace.” But he is not our first Chief Executive to do so. Speaking before a joint session of Congress on September 20, 2001, former president George W. Bush said, “Its teachings are good and peaceful, and those who commit evil in the name of Allah blaspheme the name of Allah.”

Calling for a global war, not against militant Islam but against international terrorism, Bush said, “This is the fight of all who believe in progress and pluralism, tolerance and freedom.”

While such tributes to Allah are no doubt amusing in Tehran and Benghazi, we doubt Muslims anywhere are going to fall on their swords in the name of progress and pluralism, tolerance and freedom. That’s not what Islam is all about. Allah demands submission.

The term progress, for instance, holds little meaning for people in the Middle East other than oil sheiks, where for generations, little has changed. Worse, much of what is regarded as progress in the West, is considered decadence in the East. Especially scorned by Muslims, was the “progress” called for by former President Clinton in the arena of international human rights. Remember the Hillary-led delegations to UN conferences championing abortion rights, women’s rights, and legitimizing prostitution?

Terms like tolerance and freedom, are anathema to Islamic rulers as well, whether radical Shiites or moderate Sunnis. American expeditionary forces have experienced first-hand, Islam’s zero-tolerance policy for even the most incidental public expressions of Christianity such as wearing a cross or carrying a Bible.

Regarding pluralism, Webster says it is “The existence within a nation or society of groups distinctive in ethnic origin, cultural patterns, religion, or the like...a policy of favoring the preservation of such groups within a given nation or society...” To be sure, Webster is covering more here than windmills in Lynden and beer gardens in Leavenworth.

Years ago, philosopher Horace Kallen, a “Jewish-American,” favored a policy of preserving distinctive groups in America. He scoffed at the popular notion that America was a great crucible for the nations. In 1915, he wrote an essay entitled “Democracy Versus the Melting-Pot,” in which he argued that unlike freely chosen affiliations, the ethnic bond was both involuntary and immutable. Kallen insisted that while men may change their politics, and their religions, they cannot change their grandfathers.

Kallen saw the nation not as one people, but rather a federation or democracy of nationalities, cooperating voluntarily through common institutions.

He later called his concept, “cultural pluralism.” He had no answer, however, when asked how ethnic separatism could be encouraged without weakening the original ideal of a single and united society. Critics warned that cultural pluralism would result in the Balkanization of America.

A missionary friend serving years ago in the war-ravaged region formerly known as Yugoslavia, knows something of Balkanization. It was his observation that people of Eastern Europe have a diminished national identity because of their emphasis on ethnicity. Blood feuds and generations of seeking revenge for past injustices, cause this people to look back and live in the past. Though long-standing ethnic rivalries may sometimes simmer, they are never assuaged. Americans, on the other hand, have been known as a forward looking people, optimistic about the future, expecting to make things better for their children and grandchildren.

In his book, The Disuniting of America,<sup>1</sup> Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. says, “At the beginning, America was seen as a severing of roots, a liberation from the stifling past, an entry into a new life, an interweaving of separate ethnic strands into a new national design.” He says the unstated national motto was “Never look back.” John Quincy Adams said, “They must cast off the European skin, never to resume it. They must look forward to their posterity [not] backward to their ancestors.”

Schlesinger notes that George Washington had similar advice for immigrants. Washington said, “The bosom of America is open...to the oppressed and persecuted of all Nations and Religions.” But, he warned, immigrants who nestled as groups in the national bosom might retain the “Language, habits and principles (good or bad) which they bring with them.” Therefore, he urged them to settle as individuals, prepared for “intermixture with our people.” Then they would be “assimilated to our customs, measures and laws: in a word, soon become one people.”

British historian, James Bryce, author of The American Commonwealth (1888), marveled at what he experienced during his long stay in America. He wrote that he was struck by “the amazing solvent power which American institutions, habits, and ideas exercise upon newcomers of all races...quickly dissolving and assimilating the foreign bodies that are poured into her mass.”

Now, let us clearly state the overarching reason for America’s amazing solvent power. GOD.

On June 8, 1630, Governor John Winthrop, a Puritan preacher, drew up a document he called A Model of Christian Charity. It went a step further than the Mayflower Compact of the Pilgrims, by stating how and why a body politic gathered under God and governed by mutual consent would work. Winthrop urged:

“We must hold a familiar commerce together in all meekness, gentleness, patience, and liberality. We must delight in each other, make one another’s condition our own, rejoice together, mourn together, labor and suffer together, always having before our eyes our Commission and Community in this work, as members of the same body. So shall we keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace...For we must consider that we shall be as a City upon a Hill.”

America’s founders understood the Word, and had a vision for one people under God—And the glory which You gave Me I have given them, that they may be one just as We are one... (Jn 17:22)

So hear this: America cannot be that City upon a Hill if it thinks it can serve plural masters.

And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal (Allah), then follow him... (1Kings 18:21).

Rick Forcier

---

<sup>1</sup> Schlesinger, Arthur M. Jr., The Disuniting of America, Whittle Communications LP, 1991